

Your Love Pulled Me In

I was born a sinner you were born a saint
You learned how to love I learned how to hate
And I was running I was running your love pulled me in
Your love pulled me in
Bursting at the seams my heart was full of pain
You threw your arms around me and stitched it up again
While I was weeping while I was weeping your love pulled me in
Your love pulled me in

CHORUS

You kissed away my pain in the Belfast rain
You somehow washed the hatred out of me
For beneath that loving smile there's an angel in disguise
Who has come beyond the stars to rescue me

From the rolling hills of Ireland to Thailand's Tonsi bay
We watched the sunlight fading and the stars came out to play
And we were loving we were loving and the ocean touched our toes
The ocean touched our toes
We made a solemn promise that we would never part
That nothing would divide us we swore and crossed our hearts
While we were dreaming we were dreaming the ocean touched our toes
The ocean touched our toes

CHORUS

The moral to this song is that when your luck is down
And the world has turned its back on you take a look around
There'll be an angel there'll be an angel standing by your side
To light to guard to guide

